In an interview with Law360, Dave Walton discusses the legal challenges facing employers as their workforce and workplace adopt generative AI (GenAI) tools. While these technologies automate time-consuming tasks like screening resumes and conducting interviews, he says it could engage in "algorithm drift" that results in improper bias and potential litigation risks for employers. Dave explains that setting up proper policies and a proactive risk management framework will help employers mitigate risk during this "free-for-all" period as GenAI is adopted across America's workplaces.
