By: David S. Jones

In his bylined article published in Auto Dealer Today, David Jones provides employers with important information about their rights and obligations if the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency happens to show up at their dealership. In order to limit potential liability, David recommends that all dealerships have protocols in place to properly handle any ICE visits or requests, and he discusses some steps employers can take to ensure they are complying to the best of their knowledge.
