Last November, California, Arizona, Maine, Massachusetts, and Nevada all voted to legalize the recreational use of marijuana, and their respective measures passed in all but Arizona. In addition, Arkansas, Florida, and North Dakota joined 28 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, and Puerto Rico in legalizing the medical use of marijuana, with Montana expanding the scope of its medical marijuana statute to reduce certain limitations on prescriptions and increase the number of conditions for which marijuana can be prescribed.

What does the legalization of marijuana mean for employers and drug-free policies in the workplace?
