

Law.com Taps Labor Relations Co-Chair for Q&A on Labor Peace Agreements in Cannabis Industry

News
6.18.21

Todd Lyon, co-chair of Fisher Phillips' Labor Relations practice, recently spoke with Law.com on labor peace agreements statutes and their implications for the cannabis industry. Featured in the publication's weekly Higher Law column, the Q&A touches on how labor peace agreements impact the employer-employee relationship and conflicts between enforcement of federal labor law and the fact that cannabis remains illegal at the federal level. Todd explains that today's labor peace agreements contain many numerous overreaching provisions that are becoming untenable for employers in the industry. For employers who are eager to get into the cannabis business, he recommends working with legal counsel to examine and understand the provisions of these agreements.

To read the article visit Law.com.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Todd A. Lyon
Partner
503.205.8095
Email

Service Focus

Labor Relations

Industry Focus

Cannabis

Related Offices

San Francisco