

Houston Partner and Healthcare Co-Chair Weighs in on the Looming Expiration of OSHA's ETS

News 12.15.21

In an interview with Modern Healthcare, Kevin Troutman weighs in on OSHA's expiring ETS. The standard–which is set to expire Dec. 21 unless OSHA issued a final rule–requires healthcare facilities to make certain accommodations and implement certain activities around COVID-19 vaccinations. Kevin said providers should continue to monitor developments, but that a permanent federal rule seems unlikely at this point.
