In a SHRM article urging employers to audit their pay practices for compliance with federal, state and local laws, Ben Ebbink weighed in on the expiration of California's statewide COVID-19 supplemental paid-sick-leave law.

Ben said that "employers could see a renewed push in the state Legislature to revive the benefit as the coronavirus pandemic continues."

The article also discussed minimum wage changes, exempt salary thresholds, and other pandemic-related rules set to change in 2022.
