

Forbes Interviews Sacramento Partner About California's Proposed Salary Transparency Law

News

5.24.22

In an interview with Forbes, Ben Ebbink discusses California's proposed salary transparency law, which would require employers with at least 250 employees to post a detailed breakdown of workers' salaries. While there have been similar laws enacted in New York City and Colorado, California's law would up the ante by requiring employers to post the data publicly. Ben questions whether the portion of the bill making pay data reports public will pass without amendments, but he warns that any version of the bill that does pass will likely have a "multiplier effect" for employers across the nation.

To read the article visit Forbes (subscription required).

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Benjamin M. Ebbink

Partner

916.210.0400

Email

Service Focus

Pay Equity

Related Offices

Sacramento