

Fisher Phillips Partner Offers Best Practices for Building a Remote Team

Publication

7.01.22

In a bylined article in New Orleans City Business, Stephen Scott offers best practices to employers building remote teams. In the article, he covers a range of issues, from pay transparency to local laws and regulations, to employee trainings. “While employment laws differ from state to state and even city to city, the common thread is that noncompliance can lead to costly and time-consuming lawsuits,” Stephen writes. “While managing employees in new locations may present challenges for a business, sometimes offering remote work may be the competitive advantage needed in the current job market.”
