In an interview with HR Brew, Courtney Leyes shares her insights on how employers can help set parameters around hush trips, bleisure travel, and workcations. Courtney explains that HR should have a balance between rules and autonomy to keep the process healthy. "It's kind of like parenting — whenever you're super strict and nobody can ever tell you anything, people do things on the side." The article also references a Fisher Phillips' insight that goes more in-depth and provides a checklist for employers to identify the potential risks when employees start mixing business travel with pleasure.
