

Law360 Profiles Andrew Sommer's Arrival in Los Angeles

News

5.17.23

In an interview with Law360, Andrew Sommer discusses his move to Fisher Phillips as a workplace safety lawyer who represents employers throughout inspections, investigations, and OSHA enforcement actions. He told Law360 that he is "excited to join a firm known for providing workplace safety counsel and advice to some of the largest and most valued companies throughout the country." He also said he's "looking forward to becoming an integral part of the firm's national workplace safety platform," and he explained that his years of experience will bolster the breadth and depth of what Fisher Phillips already has to offer in the workplace safety arena.

Todd Scherwin, regional managing partner of Fisher Phillips' Los Angeles office, said he is glad to have Sommer on the team. "Workplace safety is a matter of concern for all employers, and Andrew's track record of handling the most sensitive inspections, investigations, and enforcement actions is such a valuable component of what we can offer our clients here in California and across the rest of the country."
