Overview

Emma Brockway represents a variety of clients in workplace disputes. Her primary practice includes defending employers against allegations of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, and wrongful termination. Emma also assists the firm's Workplace Investigations Practice Group with conducting workplace investigations related to allegations of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, fraud, and other prohibited conduct.

Prior to joining Fisher Phillips, Emma was an associate at a multi-practice law firm in Houston, Texas, where she focused on employment litigation, civil rights matters, and general personal injury lawsuits.

During law school, Emma interned for the Honorable Nancy Johnson of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas. Emma also interned at the University of Houston System Office of the General Counsel.
