Overview

Emily Town advises and represents employers in various workplace law matters, including litigation, contract and policy drafting, regulatory compliance, internal investigations and privacy. Her experience includes representing employers and labor unions in state and federal courts, before administrative agencies, and the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB).

Prior to joining Fisher Phillips, Emily worked in the Pittsburgh office of a national law firm where she represented employers in all phases of litigation.

Emily has been an adjunct professor of law at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law, helping students with practical trial advocacy skills in the Unemployment Compensation Practicum and providing an overview of workplace safety and labor law in Pitt's HR Law Online program.
