Aside from the beauty of the country, Brazil presents many advantages to companies looking to do business there. As the most populated Latin American country, Brazil offers a large consumer base in a developing market seeing substantial economic growth. However, companies have to be mindful of the employment issues attached to setting up shop in Brazil which may differ from those they're used to in the US or other international jurisdictions. Join Nan Sato as she interviews Meilin Ng Canova, a Brazilian employment attorney, on some of the key considerations employers need to be aware of.
