If your company has an affiliate in China or does business with China, the Justice Department's newly issued rules on sensitive data transfers could have a major impact on your operations. These restrictions affect sensitive data transfers to countries of concern—raising critical compliance questions for multinational businesses, research institutions, and tech companies.

In this webinar, Nan Sato, Co-Chair of the International Practice Group, and Kile Marks, Privacy and Cyber attorney, will break down the new rule and answer pressing questions, including:

- Are we covered?
- Is this serious?
- What happens if we don't comply?
- Do we qualify for an exemption?
- How is "bulk" interpreted?
- What steps do we need to take to stay compliant?

If you have any questions, please contact Tessa Moran.
