A coast-to-coast uptick in workplace activism has renewed national attention to the effects of complacent approaches to labor relations. In this uneasy environment of union organizing campaigns and very high-profile work stoppages, one wrong decision can disrupt your employee engagement, labor relations strategies, and the achievement of business objectives. Now is the time to be proactive. It's time to take meaningful steps to protect your workforce and operations from toxic labor relations.

Join Labor Relations Group Co-Chair, Todd A. Lyon and Labor Partner, Erik Laiho, for a full-day seminar as they share the latest lawful techniques and effective strategies to avoid a toxic workplace. Labor relations and senior human resources professionals will come away with a series of actionable best practices covering topics such as:

1. Enhancing employee engagement to mitigate against the appeal of third-party representation.
2. Efficient and persuasive collective bargaining strategies, while amending historic unworkable language.
3. Strike preparation and management.
4. Effective disciplinary investigations and decision making.
5. Grievance processing to avoid arbitration or ensure greater success at arbitration.
