January 22, 2015 – “It’s Not Too Late: There’s Still Time to Avoid Paying Twice for Employee Health Coverage”

Every carpenter knows: if you measure once, you’re going to end up cutting twice. But when it comes to paying for health care coverage, employers and HR managers would do well to heed the same advice. If you don’t measure your employees correctly, you could end up paying two times: once for coverage and a second time to the IRS who will fine you for not properly counting your full time workers.
